30 Jap Women Perish in Fire

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
MINAKAMI, Japan (AP) — Thirty Japanese, most of them elderly women on an excursion, were killed in a fire that swept through six hotel buildings in this ski and hot springs resort early today. Another 12 persons were injured.

It was Japan's worst hotel fire since World War II.

Happenings in World on Weekend

The World's Weekend

President Johnson picked up more support for his Viet Nam policies over the weekend but acquired additional problems from French President Charles de Gaulle. Thirty-two governors met with Johnson Saturday and later voted unanimously that they "wholeheartedly support and endorse" his Viet Nam policies. Johnson told the governors that spending in Viet Nam has been running slightly below estimates this year. He said it is too soon to decide whether higher taxes will be needed to finance the war.

The 32 Senate Republicans have reached what they call remarkable unity in support of Johnson's prosecution of a limited war in Viet Nam. De Gaulle said he believes the world crisis has moved from Europe to Asia and he no longer sees any need for any Atlantic Alliance military organization. He said France was withdrawing its remaining forces in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization commands and that two principal NATO military headquarters would leave France. De Gaulle said France could accept on its territory only forces and installations completely under French command. The United States has 20 supply bases or headquarters in France.

Weekend developments in the U.S. include:

Faubus All Praise for Program

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Orval Faubus returned from Washington Sunday with praise for the Arkansas anti-poverty program, but little comment on political developments in the state while he was away.

The state's antipoverty program, he told newsmen in airport interviews, has the reputation of being the best in the nation. Faubus said he told officials that the federal program did not need to be changed, just improved.

Faubus said he and other governors were briefed on the Viet Nam war by President Johnson and ranking administration officials. He said there was unanimous support from the governors for the administration's handling of the war.

He said he told the President that the action of Ronald Ramsey of California, who has made propaganda tapes for Radio Hanoi, was treason and that something should be done about it.

The governor declined comment on Sen. John L. McClellan's announcement Saturday that he would seek re-election, said he doesn't know when he will reveal his political plans and shied away from the squabble over leadership of the Arkansas Young Democrat Clubs.

Faubus said he was unaware that Guy Jones Jr. of Conway had withdrawn from the race for president of the YDC Sunday, triggering another dispute in the organization.

He said he didn't care who was elected president of the YDC, "as long as he is a Democrat."

Astronauts Confident of Tuesday Flight

By JIM STROTSMAN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The launching of the Gemini 8 astronauts on a rendezvous and space-walk flight today was postponed 24 hours until Wednesday because of leaks in both an Atlas rocket and the spacecraft.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A confident pair of Gemini 8 astronauts attend final mission and weather reviews today. Activity increased around the launch pad in preparation for the beginning of an action-packed flight Tuesday aimed at the first hook-up in space of two satellites.

With three busy days in orbit ahead of them and a favorable launch-day forecast from the weatherman, Air Force Maj. David R. Scott and Neil A. Armstrong took most of the day off today to conserve strength for their rendezvous and space-walking mission.

While they sleep tonight technicians will begin the final countdown for the silvery 66-foot-tall Atlas rocket which will hurl an unmanned Agena target satellite into space, and on the astronauts' Gemini-Titan 2 rocket on a launch pad 6,000 feet away.

The tricky double header launch is scheduled to get under way at 10 a.m. (EST) Tuesday when the Atlas thunders aloft to propel the 26-foot-long, cylinder-shaped Agena into a planned 185-mile-high orbit around the earth.

Armstrong and Scott are to blast off at 11:41 a.m., catch up with the Agena on Gemini 8's fourth orbit 5 1/2 hours later and link up with it an hour later.

Early Wednesday morning, Scott is to become a human satellite for nearly 2 1/2 hours—performing tasks outside the spacecraft at the end of a 100-foot lifeline.

The extent of life at high altitudes and the effect of outer space on living things from earth will be the basis of an important experiment initiated during Scott's space walk.

The astronaut plans to take a package of live organisms — including three types of viruses, mold spores and other microscopic specimens—and attach it to the Agena space target. In addition, a sterile patch will be attached to the Agena which is designed to collect specimens of life present in space.

The same Agena may be used as a second target for a later Gemini mission — Gemini 10 — and astronauts on board that spacecraft hope to recover the packages left by Scott so scientists on earth can study what happened.

Technicians at Gemini launch complex 19 today were to turn on the fuel cells aboard the spacecraft, and check guidance systems of both the spaceship and launch vehicle.

Loading of liquid hydrogen and oxygen which provide electrical power in the fuel cells was to be completed.

Planes Hit Ruins of U.S. Camp

By THOMAS A. REEDY

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Air Force and Marine fighter-bombers roared over the ruins of the Ashau Special Forces camp today in the second day of air strikes against the North Vietnamese regiment that overran the isolated outpost on the Laotian border.

The jets ran into "the cheeriest anti-aircraft fire" ever experienced in South Viet Nam, but they destroyed one building, knocked out five mortar positions and apparently neutralized the Red air defenses around the camp, a U.S. spokesman said.

The U.S. Command did not report any losses of planes in the desperate effort to save the camp with air support last week. Six American aircraft were lost to the Communist gunners who set up 50-caliber machine guns in the jungled hill around Ashau.

The Viet Cong shot down a single-engine U.S. Army L-19 spotter plane on a reconnaissance mission Feb. 10, opening the way for the first of three days of air strikes.

pilot was injured and rescued. His observer was killed.

U.S. pilots flew 42 missions against North Viet Nam Sunday, despite an overcast, the spokesman said. They ranged from the 17th Parallel frontier to Vinh, 150 miles up the coast, and to the area around Dien Bien Phu, in the northwest, striking a familiar list of roads, bridges and other communications targets.

The spokesman said they destroyed a radar site 31 miles northwest of Cape Ron, midway between Vinh and the southern border.

The ground war continued at relatively low ebb, but the U.S. Command disclosed that the U.S. 173rd Airborne Brigade, the 1st Infantry Division and Australian troops had launched a new sweep, Operation Silver City, in the thick jungle 30 miles northeast of Saigon last Tuesday. It was kept quiet until the first contact with the Reds.

Shortly after noon today American paratroopers came across two Viet Cong bunkers. The Communists opened up with small-arms fire and exploded four shrapnel scattering mines. The Abies fought with artillery fire while set off seven explosions.

The 2nd Infantry found six Viet Cong soldiers and one chinese gun, 51 tons of rice, and 800 gallons of fuel in Communist base camps and bunkers while sweeping a flank.

Along the central coast, a Vietnamese army company sent scouts ahead to trigger a Viet Cong ambush on a supply convoy en route from Quang Ngai City to the village of Thach Tru, 20 miles south. Once the Reds opened fire, the government troops called in air, artillery and naval barrages on the ambushers, estimated at three companies, a government spokesman said. No report was given of casualties on either side.

Dreamed of Death and It Was True

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Gently, Lawrence Lyden awakened his daughter, Lois, 18. She looked up at her father and before he uttered a word she said: "I know, dad. Dennis is dead. I just dreamed about it."

Word of the death of Dennis, 20, in action in Viet Nam had reached the Lyden home only moments before.

When Dennis fell Saturday, it was the second time he had been wounded. The last time he recovered and returned to the fighting lines. He was one of eight Lyden children.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

How Not To Make It Big With In-Laws
Dear Helen: I have been married a year and am having "In-Law" problems. Not that they aren't sweet and generous, but they are inconsiderate at the dinner table! They raised my husband to eat "something of everything" that was on the table, and are trying to make me do the same.

I don't like eggs unless they are scrambled. I don't like cheese or anything with cheese in it. I detest salads. I can't stand pumpkin or mince pie. Yet I just spent a week with Bill's folks, and they only served scrambled eggs twice. Rest of the time they were fried, poached, or even ug! boiled. When they didn't serve the eggs scrambled I would just get up from the table, go out in the kitchen and scramble them myself, dirtying plenty dishes and pans so they would take the hint.

Every meal there would be a big salad by my plate, and it just got thrown away. The had cheese in some form constantly. One night they served macaroni and diced ham and ruined it by adding cheese. When I saw that was all they had to eat I got up from the table and got a can of sardines out of the cupboard. When they had pumpkin or mince pie I just got up and got a dish of ice cream from the refrigerator.

I don't like mustard, dill pickles, mayonnaise, etc. Yet when they had hamburgers, both times they put all that junk on mine, and they would laugh as I took my bun apart and scraped off the stuff.

Can you tell me how anyone can be so inconsiderate? — Disillusioned

Dear Dis: ... It's easy: just take a lesson from one super-spoiled childish bride whose eating habits must have jelled at age-four.

Your in-laws are trying to tell you something, honey — like "Grow up!" If your husband doesn't continue the education, he'd better send for a "hungry" button. — H.

Dear Helen: Some nut in my family threw out the paper. Can you reprint the address of the monthly shoppers' newsletter which gives the addresses of food and household goods companies that offer cash refunds, free gifts or money-saving coupons if you send in a box top or label of the product? I believe you said it cost $3.00 a year to subscribe, and you could save the cost back in a month. — Penny Pincher

Dear P. P.: Once more — with feeling! Not since the scrap flapper have I been so deluged with requests for an address: The shoppers' newsletter is called "Quick Silver," and you can get further information on it by writing to Eggleston Enterprises, Milford, New York. Good luck! — H.

Dear Readers: While we're on the address circuit, here are a few others about which I have had numerous queries:

Handle With Care

To clean her rug, a housewife made use of a powerful cleaning fluid. But, working in a closed room, she inhaled so much of the lethal fumes that she died. Was the manufacturer of the cleaning fluid legally liable for her death?

After a court test, the company was indeed held liable—mainly because of a misleading label on the can. The brand name, in large letters, strongly implied that the product was safe to use. As for danger, the only warning was small and inconspicuous.

Damage suits are rising with growing frequency in the field of "product liability." One key issue is the responsibility of a manufacturer to warn the consumer of possible danger.

Sometimes the matter is covered by specific statutory requirements, such as marking poison with a skull and crossbones. But even without any specific requirements, a manufacturer generally has a duty to give warning, when needed, of dangers inherent in his wares.

For, in this age of synthetic and complex products, the consumer is often unable to detect those dangers for himself.

"Such a dependent society," said one judge, "must exact greater care than in more simple days and must require from manufacturers or producers increased integrity and caution as the only protection of its safety and well-being."

Nevertheless, the law will not blame the manufacturer for every mishap in which his product plays a part. He need not warn the consumer of hazards that should be obvious.

For instance, the manufacturer need not place a HANDLE WITH CARE notice on a hammer, just because it can smash your thumb. Or on a needle, just because it can puncture your skin.

Nor is the manufacturer liable in his warning, although properly given, is not properly heeded.

Thus, a man who was burned by an inflammable adhesive was held not entitled to damages from the manufacturer. He had used the product near an open flame, even though the container carried a plain and pointed warning not to do so.

In short, the manufacturer does owe you fair warning of danger. After that it's up to you.

A Vote for Koufax

NEW YORK (NEA) — Bill Russell has gone too far in pursuing a favorite tack here — that pro basketball players are great athletes.

Bill's gaudy quivers because no basketball player has ever won the Hickok Award, a tidy little promotion in which a $10,000 diamond-studded belt is awarded to the best athlete in the country.

(The belt's O.K., but who's going to be caught dead wearing it to the office? So the diamonds, as I recall, usually wind up in a brooch or ring for milady.)

"It's the biggest joke in sports," asserts Bill.

Also the most expensive one, Bill should know. Because, although the belt is advertised as a $10,000 gimmick, inside sources inform me that the Hickok people insure it for $30,000 — which is what it would cost to purchase it on the open market.

"Nobody's going to tell me," further bristles Bill. "That Sandy Koufax is a better athlete than me."

(Russell also added, "I'll win it or Wilt Chamberlain." But that's another story.)

Sandy was the winner of the Hickok Award for 1965. And I want to tell Russell that the Dodgers' left-hander is a better athlete than the stoop-shouldered 6-10 center of the Boston Celtics — goatee or no goatee.

Sandy was one of the better schoolboy basketball players as a high school kid in Flatbush and enrolled at the University of Cincinnati on a cage scholarship. He was a jumper, just like Russell is. Since Sandy is some eight inches shorter than Bill, I'll concede there's no chance he'd ever rival Russell as a pivot man.

At the same time, I never heard of Russell throwing a curve ball, slider or changeup. And put them on the basketball court and I'm not sure Russell would beat Koufax in a simple game of "horse" or "21."

Russell then questioned the pure athletic ability of the other athletes who won the award. Well, the list includes fellows like Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, Jimmy Brown and Otto Graham. Bill said he would play "... football players, baseball players, anybody, in a sport that neither of us is paid for playing, and we'll (Russell and Chamberlain) beat them."

He couldn't even beat Graham playing a musical instrument. Otto was once proficient in the French horn, oboe, violin and cornet. I know he couldn't take Graham on a golf course. Others have tried. And he wouldn't come close to Jimmy Brown in lacrosse. Jimmy was an All-America in that sport at Syracuse.

Russell wasn't even a natural athlete when he came out of McClymonds High School in Oakland. He could jump, period. The University of San Francisco gambled in giving him a basketball scholarship.

Of course, Bill has since gone on to become the most valuable performer in the history of basketball. I thought the Hickok people should have a say in this controversy, and this was the reaction of Murray Goodman, who dreamed up the whole stunt:

"Basketball? Why, Sandy Koufax has to play in a hot sun or cold day. What kind of weather does a basketball player have to contend with?"

Casey Stengel couldn't have matched such rhetoric.

Longden in Farewell to Horse Racing

By TED MEIER

Associated Press Sports Writer
It had to be the most dramatic farewell in sports since Ted Williams crashed a home run in his last time at bat.

Johnny Longden, the 39-year-old grandfather who started riding when Babe Ruth and Bill Tilden and Bobby Jones were household names, was up on George Royal for his farewell appearance in the San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita.

He'd already won once on this last racing day of his career, a career that stretches back to 1927, the year Charles Lindbergh flew the Atlantic and Al Jolson made "The Jazz Singer."

George Royal was away slowly in the $125,000 race Saturday and was dead last the first time past the grandstand. But Longden had things in hand, moved up in time and came whipping and driving over the last 70 yards to win it by a nose.

A mighty cry went up from the crowd of 60,792 when George Royal's number went up on the board after the stewards had studied pictures of the finish.

The pandemonium increased as old Johnny took the 5-year-old Canadian-bred into the winners' circle, the 6,032nd time he'd brought home a winner.

"I made me feel I'd done a good job," was Longden's only comment.

He'd won earlier in the day on Chiclero. Moments after that victory, a sign appeared on the bulletin board in the jockey's room.

"John, you are only 969 races from 7,000. Do you really think you'll quit?"

"He'd better," answered Mrs. Longden.

"I know who wrote it," Longden said. "Bill Shoemaker."

Shoemaker is closest to Longden's record winning total, and is the man Johnny says will eventually pass it.

Kentucky Was Supposed to Build This Year

By BOB GREEN

Associated Press Sports Writer
It was supposed to be a building year at Kentucky.

They really didn't have much, coming off a 15-10 season, their poorest in many years. They were short on experience and hurting for height.

So they go into the semifinals of the NCAA national basketball championship with the nation's No. 1 ranking the favorites' role and an unparalleled history of success.

"Nobody could have foreseen this," said Coach Adolph Rupp. "You could only dream about it." "Naturally, we would have liked to have ended up undefeated, but 26-1 is a simply unbelievable record when you stop to think about it."

The Wildcats earned their spot in the NCAA semifinals at College Park, Md., this weekend when they turned back Big Ten champion Michigan 84-77 in the Midwest regional finals at Iowa City, Iowa, Saturday.

They'll next go against powerful Duke, ranked second in the nation and possessor of a 25-3 record, in one semifinal. The other matches Texas Western, No. 3 in the country and 26-1 against unranked Utah, 20-6.

Duke blew a 16-point lead but came back to take Syracuse 91-81 in the Eastern regional finals at Raleigh, N.C., Texas Western tugged Kansas 81-80 in double overtime at Lubbock, Tex., and Utah subdued Oregon State 70-74 at Los Angeles.

A crowd estimated at 20,000 by airport officials greeted Rupp's Runts when the Kentucky squad returned to Lexington, Ky., Sunday, then paraded the team through town.

"A great tribute to a great bunch of boys," said Rupp, who has called this the best of all his teams. That covers a lot of ground, since the Baron has coached four NCAA champions, a record.

Rupp gave his team a day off today — "they're more beat up than any football team" — but will go back to work Tuesday in preparation for Duke.

"Duke is a good team," the old Baron said, "a formidable opponent."

Duke Coach Vic Bubas agrees. "I think we can win the championships," Bubas said. "We've got enough board power, enough speed and good outside shooting."

While Kentucky's injuries were mostly bumps and bruises, Utah has more serious worries. Starter Lyndon MacKay pulled a knee tendon in the regional title game against Oregon State and is a doubtful starter. Utah lost George Fisher two weeks ago with a broken leg.

Kansas Coach Ted Owens still was fuming about the officiating in his losing effort against Texas Western, but admitted that he "would have to label Texas Western one of the best ball clubs around if you get a loosely called game."

His chief complaint was a call on Jo Jo White with one second left in the first overtime. White had just dropped in a 25-footer for the apparent winner, but an official ruled White had stepped out of bounds. The game went to a second overtime and TWC took it.

In other major weekend action, Villanova eliminated St. John's, N.Y., 63-61, Boston College upset Louisville 96-90 in three overtimes, Army upended Manhattan 71-66 and San Francisco whipped Penn State 89-77 in first-round games of the National Invitation Tourney in New York.

Coach Sure

His Celtics

to Win Again

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics counted upon promised help from Baltimore today as the National Basketball Association's regular campaign entered its final week.

The Celtics, bidding for a 10th straight Eastern Division title and an eighth consecutive NBA championship, looked for outside help with a little disappointment Sunday, after clobbering the Baltimore Bullets 129-98 at the Boston Garden.

The victory enabled the Celtics to remain one game behind the Philadelphia 76ers, who rallied to edge the New York Knicks 115-113. Boston and Philadelphia each have three games left.

"We'll win our three against Detroit, New York and Cincinnati," Boston Coach Red Auerbach said. "And I'm going to go out on the limb and predict that Baltimore, at home, will beat the 76ers in their final game next Sunday."

Coach Paul Seymour of the Bullets gave the Celtics a vote of confidence, promising that his team will beat Philadelphia. "I'm not interested in how Boston or Philadelphia fairs," Seymour said. "We're in a struggle with St. Louis for second place in the Western Division and couldn't care less at this point about the East. However, I'll say one thing — we'll win that game with the 76ers next Sunday."

Joe Caldwell's 14-point spree inside five minutes in the third quarter paced St. Louis to a 115-106 victory over Cincinnati, leaving the Hawks one game ahead of fourth-place San Francisco and two behind second-place Baltimore in the Western Division scramble for playoff positions.

San Francisco edged Detroit 121-119 behind the playmaking and 24-point effort of Guy Rodgers in Sunday's other game.

Mt. Home and Central Take State Titles

By ED SHEARER

Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A sophomore under pressure and two seniors determined to avoid a third defeat snarled their teams to state basketball championships.

The sophomore, Gary Douglas, soaked up the pressure with apparent ease and drilled in a free throw with three seconds left to give Little Rock Central the Class AAA title with a 71-70 victory over Jonesboro Saturday night.

Danny Keeter and Vernie Harris, the seniors, took charge for Mountain Home and sparked the Bombers to a 70-60 victory over Harrison in the Class AA title game.

Keeter, the Bombers' floor leader, tallied 23 points and Harris added 25 points and led his mates in rebounding as Mountain Home avenged two earlier defeats.

The defeat ended Harrison's hopes of completing a perfect season. The Gobblins posted a 35-1 record and ranked No. 1 in the final Associated Press Arkansas high school basketball poll.

Mountain Home, No. 3, finished with a 33-3 mark.

Central, the No. 2 team, had to win the hard way—without All-Stater Rickey Tanneberger who poured in 31 points before fouling out with 4:42 left in the game.

Jonesboro nursed a three-point lead in the waning minutes, but ball-handling ace Mack McAllister fouled out with 2:37 left and Central rallied.

Mike Pyron sank a free throw and Joe Rath hit a layup to tie it at 70-70 with 1:57 left.

Douglas followed through with the winning point before 7,097 fans, the largest crowd ever to see a basketball game in Arkansas.

Douglas had 14 points and Pyron 11 as the Tigers won their sixth state title. McAllister tallied 25 points and Jerry Nichols 29 for Jonesboro.

Mountain Home took the lead for good a 5-4 midway in the first period. The Gobblins got within four points several times near the end, but Keeter, Harris and substitute Stanley Trauth continuously sank baskets to keep the Bombers in command.

Lendel Thomas led Harrison with 22 points and Donnie Watts, hitting mostly long sets from the corner, had 21.

"They never quit," said Central Coach Jim Cathcart. "I don't know what else to say. I'm beside myself. We kept after them and put a little pressure on them in the last two minutes. They didn't hold up too good. That's the thin line between winning and losing."

Mountain Home Coach Marvin Bishop had wanted a third shot at the Gobblins. He said he learned a lesson from the first two defeats, not to slow down the game with a lead.

The Bombers kept plugging away and led most of the way.

Bobby Hull Cracks Own Hockey Mark

By JOE MOOSHIL

Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull sat in front of his locker stall after scoring his 52nd goal Sunday night, cracked his million-dollar smile and said, "Where is everybody?"

Although the Golden Jet had broken his own record of 51 goals which he set Saturday night, the Chicago Black Hawk dressing room appeared empty.

Unlike when he tied the National Hockey League record of 50 goals and again when he scored No. 51 against the New York Rangers, there were no television cameras, no announcers begging for tapes and no photographers.

The weary Jolden Jet appreciated the relative solitude. His only comment concerned the Hawks' chances of winning the league championship—strengthened when they smashed Toronto 5-1 with a four-goal barrage in the final period while Montreal dropped a 3-2 decision to the New York Rangers. The Hawks are one point behind league-leading Montreal, which has the advantage of nine games remaining to eight for Chicago.

"I'd have to say we must win our last eight games," said Hull. "Then I think we could wrap it up. We cannot depend on anyone else, but the Rangers sure gave us a big boost with their win tonight." He ignored a question of how many goals he'll score by the end of the season.

Hawk Coach Billy Reay, however, stood by a previous prediction that Hull will get 50 and said Toronto could be the key to Chicago's chances of finishing first.

"Montreal has three games with Toronto," said Reay, "and a lot depends on what happens in these three games. Our victory tonight put us six points ahead of Toronto so we can afford to pull for them for a while."

The Detroit Red Wings snapped an eight-game winless streak and mathematically clinched a Stanley Cup playoff berth by whipping Boston 8-4 in Sunday night's other game.

WING SPAN—Philadelphia 76ers' Hal Greer is one of the "little" men in pro basketball but it doesn't seem that way as he stretches his 6-2 frame for a loose ball.

For Dayton's Henry Finkel . . .

It's All a Matter of Timing

By DAVE BURGIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The way he tells it, the only problem in University of Dayton basketball player Henry Finkel's life is timing.

One would think that a guy who stood 6-11 and had a name like Henry Finkel would have more problems than that.

"The trouble," Finkel explains, "is that too often my decisions come either too soon or too late."

"I still have been able to do pretty well in basketball. But I keep thinking that I could do much better if I could just get timing down pat."

When you watch Finkel play awhile, and when you look at his history, it shows.

Finkel will play along smoothly, sometimes spectacularly for a few minutes. Then all of a sudden he'll get his feet tangled trying to maneuver in the pivot, or he'll go up for a rebound too late and the ball will bounce off his nose.

"I guess if I had to rely solely on instinct to play basketball," Finkel said, "well . . . let's just say I don't think I'd be where I am now."

How Finkel got to where he is now might make the basis for a nice plot in a spy thriller. It involves three colleges, two professional teams, big money and Finkel's own knack for ill-timed decisions.

One bright day in his home town, Union City, N.J., Finkel discovered he was both a teenager and 6-5. When you're that big and that age and you don't play basketball, people begin to look at you in a queer way.

So Henry took up basketball and loved it. Trouble was, he said, "I was late starting."

Before he knew it, his height got him on the freshman team at St. Peter's College near his home. Between possibly too much concentration on basketball and tragedy at home—his father was dying of cancer—Finkel was dropped because of low scholarship.

Next he was taking courses at Hunter College in New York City. Then someone at Dayton got smart and Henry decided that Dayton, not St. Peter's, would be where he played out his college eligibility.

Meanwhile, since Finkel's original graduating class at St. Peter's was 1964, he was eligible for the National Basketball Association draft that year. Los Angeles drafted him and offered him a two-year contract worth $25,000.

It was a tempting decision Finkel didn't have to make.

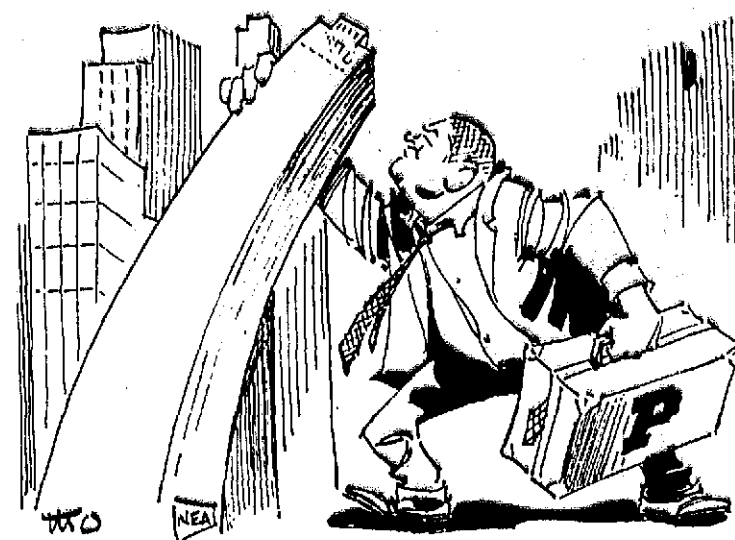

His mother stepped in. "No one in our family has ever had a college degree," she told him, "but you will." She meant now, not later.

Finkel kept a promise to her even though Philadelphia drafted him the next year and made what must have been an equally attractive offer.

The pros clearly think Henry can play in their league, although one pro scout called what Henry says is "a problem with timing," a "tendency towards clumsiness." The NBA coaches made Finkel a second-team choice on the NEA All-America team.

Finkel's 6-11 frame is thinly spread. He weighs only 220. He feels he needs more weight to withstand the rigors of pro basketball. This also has to do with timing.

"After we play our (NCAA) tournament games," he said, "I'm going to eat every TIME I get the chance."

Beano Meets New York

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Association

NEW YORK (NEA)

Beano Cook came to town the other day. For better or for worse. And set his first record two hours after his arrival.

He got an apartment. Now renting an apartment in New York is an assiduous job that requires the tenacity of a baseball holdout, the luck of the Chicago Boxing Commission and generally takes two weeks.

Carroll (Beano) Cook is the former University of Pittsburgh sports information director—a euphemism for flack—who left to become an employee of the American Broadcasting Co., its liaison man for the telecast of the college football games next fall—still a flack.

He arrived in New York at 1:30 p.m. and went directly to the apartment of Sanford (Sandy) Padwe, a sportswriter, on E. 65th St., where a lot of airline stewardesses live. The door was locked.

At 3:30 p.m., Sandy received a phone call.

"Where the dot-dot-dittum-dash did you leave the key?" bellowed Beano.

"In my pocket," said Sandy.

(Pause for a little background information: Sandy once went down to Baltimore to attend a Preakness. He had never written about a horse race before, so he was out at the track at 6 a.m., and he stayed until 8:30 p.m. He was bushed. It was hot, and all the way home on the train he kept thinking of a nice bed with clean sheets—Friday was the maid's day—and how tired he was. When he got home after midnight, he unlocked the door, stumbled over a suitcase and flicked on the light. In his bed, rumpled, reposed the ample bulk of Beano Cook.)

Now Sandy asked, "What'd you do?"

"I got an apartment."

"How?"

"Through the New York Times. I tried seven places. I've seen bigger phone booths. And they all had Murphy beds."

"What's that?"

"Wall beds. They'd ruin my back."

"So where are you now?" asked Sandy.

"On E. 26th St. They've got me filling out forms and signing things. I think they're gonna get the CIA after me."

(This is a new experience for Beano. Beano spent 11 years investigating the football offense of Johnny Michelosen, the University of Pittsburgh football coach, suspecting it was anarchistic as well as archaic. This spring Michelosen got fired. So Beano left, with his health. He used to drive an old Ford around Pittsburgh which belonged to the athletic department. He parked it next to the stadium. The stadium is on top of a steep hill. One day Beano descended and stepped on the brakes. There were no brakes. A rumor persists that the Pitt football coaches emptied the fluid from the brakes.)

Sandy continued, "What kind of place you got?"

"Well," answered Beano, "the building was built when the first settlers came."

Then he hastily cautioned Sandy not to tell anyone.

"I'm changing my image."

He'll get fired if he does that.

Here's Pennel---
Up and Over

By SANDY PADWE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—One-by-one, heads appear from behind newspapers, puzzled stares on each face, as John Pennel marches through the airport waiting room.

Behind the ticket counters (especially in Miami where they know him) the employees decide it's a good time to take a coffee break when Pennel approaches.

"Yes," said Pennel. "I am getting a little tired of it right now. All those people staring, all the questions . . . I feel like a circus performer who carries his own tent poles."

John Pennel is a pole vaulter—right now, America's best, which means he is in demand all over the country.

It also means lots of problems for Pennel who travels with two 16-foot glass fiber poles, encased in cardboard tubes.

"Everyone is always asking what you're carrying," he said. "Sometimes I tell them I'm superstitious so I carry my own lightning rod to protect the plane."

"Other times I tell them it's a fishing pole . . . that I'm going after the big ones."

"Sometimes I tell them it's microfilm. That usually puzzles them."

"I've used a line about a TV antenna a few times. But now I've got a new one. I tell them I'm a tightrope walker and these are my balancing bars."

"When I'm in a city where they don't know me, I usually have to make a real sales pitch to the airline people. When I make my reservation, I just tell them I've got an unusual piece of luggage. Then I do the talking at the airport.

"I supervise the loading myself. I think I know the baggage layouts of every aircraft flying. In Miami (his home town until a few months ago) I usually flew with the same airlines most of the time, so the baggage guys know me."

"I always have to know what type of plane I'm going on because they all have different baggage compartments. Some can't hold the poles in the belly because there are bulkheads between the compartments."

"Whenever I fly an Electra, for example, I have to load the poles through the cockpit windows and then slide them under the seats."

"In a Convair 440, the kind of plane I usually flew in Monroe, La. (he went to Northeast Louisiana College), we had to load it through the baggage door in the rear. Then I had to get in the plane, open this little compartment in the rest room and slide the pole through that."

"On any of the planes with t-tails like the 727 or the Caravelle it's pretty easy. You just slide it on board and put it under the seats."

Pennel's problems don't end there, however.

"You have to get it off again," he said, "and then get to the hotel."

"I never let anyone carry them for me either. The poles have been lost a few times."

"Usually, when I'm leaving the airport, I take the long limousines. There isn't too much trouble then. But when I have to put the poles on a bus, it's not easy. Neither are the drivers. I've really learned a lot about diplomacy."

Well, John Steinbeck had his "Travels With Charley."

John Pennel is still thinking about a good title for his travel tales.

Cleveland Indians

By SANDY PADWE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

PITCHING—The combination of Sam McDowell and Sonny Siebert is the best to hit Cleveland since Otto Graham and Dante Lavelli. McDowell was the American League's leading pitcher last season with a 2.17 ERA, a 17-11 record and 325 strikeouts. Siebert was 16-8 with a 2.43 ERA. After those two, however, the quality begins to thin out. Ralph Terry and Jack Kralick had arm trouble last year. Terry's case was extremely difficult for the Indians because he was 10-4 in July and wound up 11-6. Louis Tiant had a fair season at 11-11. Tom Kelley was 16-3 at Portland last year and the Indians hope he can become a starter. Ditto for Steve Hargan who was 4-3 with Cleveland after being called from the minors. The bullpen—Gary Bell, Don McMahon and Lee Stange—could use some strengthening. RATING—B-.

INFIELD—Fred Whitfield, at first base, slugged 26 home runs and batted in 90 runs last year. Pedro Gonzalez came over from the Yankees and did an excellent job at second base. Larry Brown also had a good year after he took over the shortstop job when Dick Howser was injured. Max Alvis is the third baseman. RATING—B-.

OUTFIELD—Power is certainly not lacking. Rocky Colavito had 26 home runs last season and Leon Wagner 28. Centerfielder Vic Davalillo was the team's leading hitter (.301). When trouble develops, Birdie Tebbetts can use reliable Chuck Hinton who had 18 home runs last season and 54 RBI. RATING—B+.

CATCHING—The Indians definitely have a problem here. Joe Azcue is the top man but he hit just .230 last year. Behind him are Duke Sims (.178) and Del Crandall who was with Pittsburgh last year. If only Crandall were five years younger. RATING—C.

BENCH—Tebbetts did a lot of juggling last season and probably will do so again this year. Hinton is a good man to have in reserve and so is Larry Brown if he doesn't beat out Dick Howser for the shortstop job. Chico Salmon is another outfield replacement. Bill Davis, a first baseman up from the minors, may give Fred Whitfield a challenge. RATING—C+.

SUMMARY—The Indians finished 15 games behind last year and really didn't do that much to strengthen themselves during the off-season. They have power, but that can't make up for thin pitching. After McDowell and Siebert, they definitely need help on the mound. Prediction—6th.

COSTLY SIGNATURE—New York Yankees General Manager Ralph Houk looks on as Mickey Mantle signs up for the 1966 season at $100,000. Recovery from his recent shoulder operation will keep Mantle out of regular training for four to six weeks.

Outdoors

By DICK WOLFF
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Fish stories are not the normal fare in this corner, simply because the purpose here is to examine means by which fish can be caught, not lost. But a rather intriguing tale came to my attention recently, and I can't resist passing it along.

Last month, Harry Miller and Rocky Robinson went fishing on the Mitchell One off the island of Eleuthera in the Bahamas. Their purpose was to test new tackle.

Midway in the afternoon, Harry tied into a bull dolphin, or perhaps it was the other way around. In any event, the battle was on. Harry fought the good fight, and after 25 or 30 minutes came out a winner.

The dolphin was a good size, roughly 40 pounds, and when brought aboard was promptly deposited in the fish box. Harry was happy. Rocky was happy.

The dolphin wasn't. After 30 minutes, a gentle thumping was heard from the direction of the fish box. It got louder and louder and then the lid to the fish box began to rise rhythmically.

"Some fighter," said Rocky, admiringly.

Harry was about to agree when the lid flew open. He leaped from his chair, dashed to the fish box, put both hands on the lid and pushed frantically downward. The lid closed, but another mighty thrust ripped it from Harry's hands, and the dolphin came straight up and out of the box. Rocky, aghast, just stood there, while Harry lunged for the fish. He didn't make it. With a vigorous flip the dolphin was over the side and gone.

Harry looked at Rocky. Rocky looked at Harry.

"Who will believe me?" asked Harry at last.

"Don't ask me," said Rocky. "I only saw it."

There should be a note here somewhere, but the only one I can think of is: A fish in the box is worth two in a boat.

KEEPING AN EYE PEELED—One of the rules of hitting is to follow the ball's flight all the way to the plate, which Dennis Menke does here as he takes his cuts in the batting cage. Menke also has his eye on the regular job as Atlanta Braves shortstop.

THE WELL CHILD Despite Intensive Campaign Polio Still Plagues Children BY WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D. Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Despite widespread campaigns to vaccinate all children over 9 months old a few cases of poliomyelitis still occur because some parents fail to give their children this protection. When a person gets the polio virus the result may be an inapparent infection, a minor illness, nonparalytic polio or paralytic polio. It is estimated that 95 per cent of all persons infected belong in the first category and that a clinically recognizable attack of polio is a complication of such an infection.

Those who develop a minor or abortive attack will, after an incubation period of six to 20 days, have fever, sore throat, a head cold, vomiting and generalized aching pains. Rarely, however, will one victim have all of these symptoms. This form of the disease subsides in a few days.

Those who have nonparalytic polio, in addition to the symptoms mentioned, develop stiffness of the neck muscles and various signs of irritation of the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord (meninges). Laboratory tests are required to differentiate this form of the disease from other types of meningitis. There is no specific treatment but with good nursing care recovery occurs within two or three weeks.

In paralytic polio a further complication is weakness or paralysis which may involve the arms, legs, neck or most

Questions Regarding Inflation

By SAM DAWSON

AP Business News Analyst
NY, WYORK (AP) — The rising cost of living — and of doing business — has Americans wondering if they're in for another round of inflation. Or, as most probably would phrase it, if tomorrow's paycheck will buy even less than today's.

As government officials and businessmen debate the complex problem of inflation and what to do about it, here are some simplified answers to the questions many people are asking today.

Q — What is inflation?
A — To most people inflation is a persistent and substantial increase in the general level of prices. But many economists call this the end product of inflation, not inflation itself. They define inflation as the result of monetary policy: "too many dollars chasing too few goods."

Q — Do we have "too many dollars" today?

A — Bankers cite the unusual rise in the supply of money and credit since last summer and say that this has given businessmen and consumers the wherewithal to bid up prices of goods. Government officials contend the money increase was needed to feed the economic growth which cut the jobless rate to 3.7 per cent for the first time in nine years.

Q — How do you tell inflation from the price increases we've been having right along?

A — By how much and how fast prices rise. The cost of living for several years rose at about 1.2 per cent a year and was called noninflationary. But in 1965 the rate jumped to 2 per cent. Bankers call this 2 per cent rise inflationary. Washington officials say 3 per cent would be the danger point and that what we've been having is "economic growth" rather than "inflation."

Q — Would 3 per cent be a big jump, historically?

A — No. The last time we had what everyone agreed was inflation was in the Korean War period. Between June 1950 and March 1951 the consumer price index rose by an average of 0.8 per cent a month. More important to the economy, wholesale prices rose an average of 1.8 per cent a month.

Q — How is the wholesale price index behaving now?
A — After several years of being practically stationary, the index has jumped 4.6 per cent since June 1964. And the rise in recent months has been the steepest.

Q — Who are the first victims of inflation?

A — Those who live on fixed incomes. These include the elderly and retired. Their pensions or Social Security checks buy less of what they need, and they can't hope for a pay increase to offset this. All savers are hurt, whether it be those who put money in banks, in insurance, or in bonds. When they use the savings, inflation has cut their market value just as if part of the savings had been stolen out.

right.

Q — Why do some enjoy inflation in its early stages?

A — Rising prices can bring rising wages, or capital gains on such things as common stocks, real estate and art objects. For a time inflation heats up the economy, makes more jobs for those producing more goods to be sold at the higher price. Business looks better, profits are higher — if worth less when spent. Then the bubble bursts and most folk discover they're worse off than before.

Q — What are today's signs of incipient inflation?

A — The unemployment rate is 3.7 per cent of the labor force, lowest since November 1953. Skilled labor shortages are appearing, sending overtime pay rolls up. Unions are raising their wage demands. Output per man hour of labor is increasing only slowly now, where it was zooming upward a year or two ago. Many raw material prices have edged up. Firms are building up inventories, some fearing either shortages or further price increases ahead. Demand for finished goods has taxed the capacity of some industries and delivery times are being stretched out as order backlogs mount.

Q — What about the monetary signs of inflation?

A — Interest rates are rising as the demand for loans increases despite a marked increase in the supply of money and credit since last summer. Consumers are spending a larger percentage of their income and saving a smaller share — although personal income has soared so high that the totals for both spending and saving are at record highs.

Q — What steps are the money managers taking to ward off inflation?

A — The Federal Reserve Board has raised interest rates. It also is tightening money by shrinking the free reserves which banks can use to make loans to business and to consumers. The idea is to restrain mildly the urge to borrow and to spend.

Q — What is the government doing about inflation?

A — Asking Congress to increase tax collections this year. This would leave less for individuals and corporations to spend now. The President also is urging labor and management to observe guidelines holding down wage and price increases.

Q — What is proposed beyond the steps already taken?

A — The President is asking the Congress to be ready to vote higher taxes quickly if inflation becomes obvious. This would leave less money to chase the available goods. Some think the Federal Reserve should make money and credit still tighter. This would involve still higher interest rates to discourage borrowing, whether to build a new plant, buy a new car or to buy a new home by means of a mortgage.

Q — But if in the days ahead wholesale and consumer prices rise still more rapidly, what is likely to happen?
A — Some consumers might put off buying high-priced goods, especially those they can easily do without. Business might hold up some of its plans for building plants or buying new equipment. Demands for higher wages to meet rising prices would become more insistent. Price increases on American goods could cut U.S. exports, swell the deficit in the balance of payments, and weaken the status of the dollar.

Martin Houses Mosquito-Eaters Just Practicing

A note from Dr. Herbert Rogers reminds us that there will be a meeting at the Texarkana Junior College auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 22, on the subject "Eastern Woodlands Wildlife."

Enclosed with his note was a pamphlet, "What You Should Know About Purple Martins," which also tells where you can buy professionally-built martin houses. They are available through either the Camellia Garden Club at Texarkana, or Ed Anderson, 4013 Rio Grande, near the Texarkana (Texas) park.

Many home craftsmen build their own martin houses, but persons either without tools or without proficiency in using them, have to buy the ready-made ones. They are on the expensive side, these being of aluminum, with 12 apartments, and running $24.95 for one model, with an extra $9.95 for a mounting pole for the other model.

Available also are large redwood models with 18 apartments, still more expensive, at Bunch Seed Store and Pet Center, Texarkana.

I have two of these — and no martins as yet; but they'll be along shortly. It's a long way from South America to Hope, and mine are always late-comers.

Getting back to the pamphlet, you learn from it why all mankind is enthusiastic about purple martins. This largest of the swallows is the No. 1 enemy of mosquitoes and garden insect pests. The purple martin eats his own weight in mosquitoes a day — up to 2,000.

The first white settlers in New England learned the facts from their Indian neighbors. The whites noticed many gourds strung up on vines between the trees wherever there was an Indian village. The Indians explained they made homes for the purple martins because the birds kept down mosquitoes and bugs — and Americans have been making homes for martins ever since.

Most of you know about this, but here's something I got from the pamphlet that I didn't know: Our local martins wind up their nesting season and leave in early July. But they don't go immediately to South America, as I had supposed. The pamphlet reports:

"Joining in irregular flocks the martins move northward on training flights for the young. Then, within a week or so, they begin their southward migration. Often they will stop over for a few days' visit to their summer home before proceeding toward South America."

That explains the mystery observed by every martin-box owner: Why the martins disappear after rearing their young, then straggle back some days later — before finally going for good. They've been off teaching the youngsters long-range flying — and navigation.

Handshake Cost Him Quite a Bit

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — A handshake with an American astronaut today cost Henry Walter Schmidt 100 Australian dollars.

Schmidt, from Renmark, 185 miles northeast of Adelaide, bet his grandson, Russell Walter Schmidt, that Russell would not meet, let alone shake hands with visiting astronauts Walter Schirra or Frank Borman.

But with the connivance of American Vice Consul J.M. Tauley, Russell, his sister Diane, 7, and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Walter Schmidt, met the astronauts and shook hands with them.

The two astronauts and their wives flew from Perth to the Woormera rocket range Thursday, inspected the facilities, then flew into Adelaide in western Australia. They return to Perth Saturday.

Grant Approved for Greene Co.

PARAGOULD, Ark. (AP) — The Office of Economic Opportunity has approved a $13,412 grant to the Greene County Rural Authority Inc., for studies of the county's needs for an antipoverty program.

The approval was announced Thursday by Curtis Crews, president of the Greene County group.

Businessman Is Executed in Viet Nam

By GEORGE ESPER
SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A government firing squad today executed the first war profiteer sentenced to death in Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's pledged crackdown against widespread graft and corruption.

A battalion of Vietnamese paratroopers sealed off the Saigon marketplace to prevent any interference from the city's large Chinese population as Ta Vinh, 34, a wealthy businessman of Chinese descent, was tied to the execution stake at dawn.

The government rejected all appeals for clemency for the father of eight, who had been convicted of "economic sabotage" by a special tribunal named by Ky to deal with war profiteers. The charges against Vinh, manager of an import-export firm, included hoarding, speculation, illegal transfer of funds and bribery.

Vinh's wife, wailing and shouting in English, Chinese and Vietnamese, appeared at the square with seven of her children to plead for her husband's life. National police kept her behind the barred wire from sight of the execution as the bullets from the 10-man army firing squad tore into Vinh's chest.

While the political effect of the execution remained unclear, a different problem for the government appeared to be simmering down. Shops reopened in Da Nang this morning after two days of peaceful demonstrations there protesting the dismissal of Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi as commander of the army's 1st Corps.

Thi, 43, a potential rival to Ky, was fired last Thursday by the rest of the ruling military directorate. He had been virtual overlord of the country's five northernmost provinces.

Downtown stores in Da Nang closed for five hours Sunday in a general strike organized by Thi's supporters in the coastal garrison town 380 miles northeast of Saigon.

The large force of U.S. Marines and other American personnel stationed at Da Nang were kept out of the downtown area to avoid being involved in any unrest.

Don't Think AEA Can Get Sigs Required

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Forrest Rozzell says he doubts that the Arkansas Education Association can obtain the 60,000 signatures needed to place a compulsory consolidation initiated act on the November general election ballot.

Many AEA leaders had talked of an initiated act to require compulsory consolidation of school districts with fewer than 400 pupils, but the proposal was all but buried Saturday.

The AEA's Council on Education increased the figure from 400 to 2,000 pupils and both sides said the change would make it impossible to win approval for the proposal.

Rozzell, executive secretary of the AEA, said he would send out the petitions under the new 2,000 figure.

The Arkansas Rural Education Association (AREA), a group formed to fight forced consolidation, gained a victory in the maneuver. AREA is composed primarily of administrators from small districts which would have been affected by the 400-pupil proposal.

Dr. W. D. McClurkin, a lifetime member of the AEA, introduced the 2,000 figure amendment. He is a former AEA president, now associated with Peabody College at Nashville, Tenn.

McClurkin said the sponsors of the original proposal had bowed to political expediency in proposing a small number of pupils as the minimum for school districts.

He said he thought the consolidation move should be "deferred until such time as the AEA is willing and able to take a stand based on factual honesty, educational soundness and professional integrity, none of which exist in the proposal of 400" as the minimum.

Court Sets Aside Check Conviction

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court today reversed a bad check conviction from Greene Circuit Court on grounds that remarks of a trial judge tended to impeach the testimony of a defense witness.

Circuit Judge John S. Mosby presided over the trial in which William J. Searle received a 3-year prison sentence on a conviction for giving a $1,250 check which his account could not cover to an automobile sales company.

The Supreme Court ordered a new trial.

The high court said that Mosby committed reversible error when he remarked, while Searle's wife was testifying about keeping books for him, "The jury can tell what you testified to. They heard it. Don't be trying to contradict the court."

Chief Justice Carlton Harris dissented from the majority opinion. He said he did not consider Mosby's remarks prejudicial.

The Supreme Court also reversed an $8,500 injury damage judgment against the Arkansas Cast Stone Co. for injuries suffered by John Lynn, who was hurt when a slab of concrete fell and broke a scaffold on which he was standing.

The accident occurred in June 1963 at the construction site of the Paragould post office.

Lynn, an iron worker, was an employee of the Garbi and Joseph Construction Co., the contractor on the job.

Arkansas Cast Stone provided concrete slabs being used in construction. The slabs were delivered to the site and the Supreme Court held that the Stone company's liability ended with delivery unless it could be proved that the slabs were manufactured in a negligent manner.

The case was decided under a legal proceeding which implied negligence on the part of the stone company because a bolt by which the slab was being lifted broke during the lifting process. The Supreme Court said the break could have been caused by improper handling at the site.

In other cases, the Supreme Court:

— Affirmed a 3-year prison sentence assessed in Craighead Circuit Court against Robert Farrar on conviction for assault with intent to kill in the shotgun wounding of Laurence Staudt on May 4, 1965.

— Affirmed a Jefferson Probate Court holding that Mrs. Mildred Hyde was entitled to lifetime use of a home left her in the will of her late husband, Oscar H. Hyde, who died in 1964. Executors of his estate contended that Mrs. Hyde had abandoned the home.

— Affirmed a Jefferson Circuit Court ruling that Universal Life Insurance Co. had to pay a $1,000 policy on the life of Lloyd Pierce, who died Aug. 25, 1964, naming Elvora Howlett as his beneficiary.

— Affirmed a Miller Circuit Court verdict in which Joseph Henry Salguth and Donald Scott each received 3-year prison sentences for false pretense in connection with obtaining $250 from a 75-year-old widow for extermination of beetles in her attic.

Reports Plot to Attack U.S. Embassy Foiled

SINGAPORE (AP) — The army takeover in Indonesia reportedly foiled a plot by Foreign Minister Subandrio to attack the U.S. Embassy in Jakarta, sources in Singapore said today.

The sources said Subandrio had urged pro-Communist forces to launch the attack in retaliation for student raids last week on Chinese Communist offices in Jakarta.

The U.S. Embassy burned all its secret documents when it learned of the plans for goons supporting Subandrio to seize documents and burn the embassy, the sources said.

Subandrio, who is also first deputy premier, wanted such an attack to show Peking that he and his followers were still a vital force in Indonesia, the informants added.

Reports reaching Singapore said 20 of Subandrio's intelligence agents exchanged shots last Saturday with paratroopers and military police sent to arrest them. Two agents were shot, the reports said.

The agents were members of an internal spy network Subandrio used to keep watch on Indonesia's military and political organizations, the reports said. Arms and explosives were reportedly found in the office of the spy network.

The three-day-old government of army chief Lt. Gen. Suharto was believed holding Subandrio and President Sukarno under house arrest at Sukarno's Merdeka Palace in Jakarta, two Japanese newsmen in Jakarta reported.

Travelers from Indonesia said in Singapore that 16 Cabinet ministers had been arrested, along with a number of other leading politicians and agents of Subandrio's spy network.

Subandrio, whose removal had been demanded by student demonstrations, may go on trial before a special military tribunal that has been probing the attempted coup last October, the sources said. After the coup was crushed, Suharto led a bloody purge of the Communists, who were accused of masterminding the plot.

The travelers said Suharto seems to be firmly in control. They reported groups were dancing and singing in the streets of Jakarta celebrating the army takeover. Province chiefs and political organizations sent promises of support, they reported.

True National Consensus Aim of Fulbright

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright said today the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which he heads is "fostering controversy" in the hope of attaining a true national consensus on Viet Nam policy.

The Arkansas Democrat, who has criticized President Johnson's Viet Nam policies, said the country is divided about American objectives in Asia and only "the honest and responsible airing of differences" can clear the air.

With the committee resuming hearings on China Wednesday, Fulbright spoke in defense of its role in a speech prepared for the National Conference of Higher Education in Chicago and made public here.

Fulbright said, "I believe that the public hearings on Viet Nam, by bringing before the American people a variety of opinions and disagreements pertaining to the war, have done far more to strengthen our country's position than to weaken it."

"The hearings have been criticized on the ground that they conveyed an 'image' of the United States as divided over the war. Since the country obviously is divided, what was conveyed was a fact rather than an image."

"The hearings on Viet Nam were undertaken by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the hope of helping to shape a true consensus, even at the cost of destroying the image of a false one," Fulbright said.

"It is perfectly true that we are fostering controversy and, for my own part, I do so without apology, because there is nothing wrong with the honest and responsible airing of differences and, more important, because controversy is the condition of intelligent decision-making and the crucible in which a consensus as to objectives may be translated into a consensus of policy as well."

Fulbright said the committee is asking questions "because China and America may be heading toward war with each other and it is essential that we do all that can be done to prevent that calamity, starting with a concerted effort to understand the Chinese people and their leaders."

Fulbright's speech followed a declaration Sunday by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey that he believes the containment of Red China's "aggressive militancy" is a worthy objective but the Peking regime should not be isolated "from the family of mankind."
